Kenny McMillan calms down excited pets with his gentle touch

When Walla Walla High School Vocational Employability Skills Teacher Gretchen Baker placed Kenny McMillan at Petco to work as part of the district's Special Education vocational training program, she thought he would be stocking shelves and cleaning up.

Before long they discovered Kenny's true talent. He was gifted in working with the animals and calming them down. His gentle touch and calm demeanor was just what the animals needed according to Petco Operations Manager Rick Fleming.

"Petco is a pet friendly company," Fleming said. Many people want to handle the animals before they buy them to make sure they are a good fit for their homes. Many of these animals come to us as babies, so they haven't been around people very much. Kenny cuddles and pets them to get them more at ease and comfortable with people."

"Kenny's duties at Petco at first included restocking the shelves and doing tasks from a list. At times this was a challenge for Kenny, so they had him petting the animals to calm them down.

This has turned out to be a win-win situation for Petco and Kenny. He has found something he really enjoys and this helps him relate better to customers. Petco has gained because the animals are calmer and people tend to purchase them if they are friendly."

Gretchen Baker - Teacher, Vocational Employability Skills

Wa-Hi Junior Kenny McMillan works with animals at Petco thanks to the district's Special Education vocational training program.

McMillan's gentle touch helps calm the animals and get them used to people. Kenny says he's always loved animals and they love him.

WWCC agrees to lease land for High School Skills Center

The effort to bring a branch campus of the Tri-Tech Skills Center to Walla Walla took another step forward recently after the Walla Walla Community College Board of Trustees approved a long-term land lease at Walla Walla Community College for the future development of the Skills Center facility.

"The location at Walla Walla Community College presents an opportunity for high school students to have more access to college-level programs and support," Superintendent Rich Carter said. "It is also close to Highway 12 which makes it a convenient location."

State legislators are also expected to approve $100,000 in state funding this session to authorize the district to complete preliminary designs. The district will also apply for state funds for detailed design fees, construction, supplies and equipment for the skills center. Learn more about the Skills Center on page 2.

Successful budget savings plan result of collaboration

Washington state's unprecedented financial crisis has sent a shockwave across the state as K-12 education is taking a substantial hit.

The district has worked in collaboration with staff, parents, students and community members to make tough budget decisions in light of the economic recession.

Our budget savings plan calls for trimming expenditures by $3.5 million for the 2009-2010 general fund budget. No permanent staff will lose their jobs. We've made reductions through attrition and transfers to eliminate 16 positions.

We have focused on protecting current class size, our staff and programs. Other districts around the state cannot make this claim.

I want to thank everyone for their thoughtful feedback, suggestions and input. It helped us prioritize and make sense of a difficult situation. Your support is appreciated.

Skills Center programs offer students hands-on training

As a branch campus of the Tri-Tech Skills Center, the Walla Walla campus would maintain a commitment to high standard technical and professional training. Instructors would be industry professionals with years of experience. The programs would be designed around local, state and national skills standards.

An added benefit of this program, is the connection to the student's home high school. The Skills Center concept is an extension of high school where students remain for three periods allowing them to make an important connection to friends, teachers and counselors.

Students also benefit greatly from the extensive connection instructors have with industry. Many students are placed in job shadows, internships and clinicals during the program. Students get to see first hand how business operates, and on many occasions our students would have a leg up when it comes to applying for and getting a job.

The Skills Center will maintain a connection with colleges and technical schools that allows students to earn college credit at little or no cost while still in high school. Tech Prep programs are saving families money and time when the student moves into advanced training. Over 90 percent of the proposed programs considered have a college credit option.

Pioneer Middle School students package meals to help feed the world's children

Students, staff and parents packaged thousands of meals to be shipped to Africa or the Dominican Republic to feed hungry children. Earlier this year Pioneer students raised $2500 from a candle sale to fund the meals.

Event organizer Pioneer PTA President Holly Carrera said 100 percent of the proceeds are supporting this hunger elimination project.

Former Inland Printing owner donates paper

Walla Walla Public Schools Print Shop recently received boxes of donated paper from Brooks Graves, former owner of Inland Printing. Graves recently sold the business to retire.

Various paper stock and sizes were included in this generous donation. Some of the paper is heavier stock and can be used for covers and flashcards.

"Walla Walla High School uses a lot of flashcards in the Foreign Language and English Departments," District Printer Kelly Gabel said. "Since we had ran out of donated paper from Boise Cascade, these departments haven't been able to afford $60 a box for flashcards. Now that we have additional donated paper to cut up for flashcards, we will be able to fill these orders."

The paper donation fills two pallets, stacked approximately 3 ft. high, according to Gabel. There is also about 15 boxes of other types of paper in the donation.

“No permanent staff will lose their jobs as a result of our plan. We’ve made reductions through attrition and transfers to eliminate 16 positions. Other districts around the state cannot make this claim. We appreciate the support and cooperation of our staff through this difficult process.” Superintendent Rich Carter

Budget Savings Plan at a glance: $3.5 million reductions for the 2009-10 school year

- Trimming staff through attrition: Positions made vacant through retirements or other reasons may not be filled. Temporary contracts are non-continuing. If the position is needed, it will be filled with the current permanent staff.
- Internal transfers: Open positions are being filled through internal transfers. This allows the district to reduce personnel expenditures, while allowing current staff to remain employed without noticeable impact to classrooms and programs. Reductions have been made to teacher support staff and learning support programs.
- Administrative cuts: Connie Taylor-Randall is transferring to the central office. This move combines two central office positions into one. The district is eliminating four Dean of Students positions. The district’s former Deans of Students are returning to the classroom or filling other district positions as part of this cost savings measure.
- Out-of-State Travel suspended: Out-of-state travel has been suspended for the 2009-2010 school year. Out of State travel funded by grants may be allowed.
- Athletic Department reductions: The district’s athletic budget will be reduced by approximately $115,000. Reduction details remain pending. This represents a 10 percent budget cut.
- Non-employee related expenditure reductions: Costs for supplies and contractual services are being cut.
- Professional Development reductions: There will be less professional development funds allocated.
- Curriculum Adoption delays: There will be delays for curriculum adoptions.
- Internal administrative hirings: Open administrative positions are being hired internally.
- Energy Management Program: This program has helped cut energy consumption 25 percent to save on utilities.
- Categorical Program Maintenance fee increase: The district is increasing its “in-direct” support fees from 2% to 4% on categorical programs (Programs include: Special Education, Bilingual, Title I/Learning Assistance Program). This helps offset the district’s general fund costs to support these non-basic education programs.
- Wednesday teacher collaboration schedule combined: The district will eliminate delayed start Wednesdays for secondary schools (Pioneer, Garrison, Walla Walla High School, Lincoln Alternative High School). All schools will follow a Wednesday early release collaboration schedule. This move cuts transportation and supervision costs.
- Lincoln Alternative High School GED prep class eliminated: The district will eliminate the Lincoln Alternative Education General Education Diploma preparatory class. This program is still available at Walla Walla Community College. District staff will work closely with WWCC to provide this service to Walla Walla Public Schools students.
- Library-Media Specialist reduced to half-time: The district will eliminate three Library-Media Specialist positions. The remaining three Library-Media Specialists will be assigned to two schools to provide half-time service at each of their schools. Elementary libraries will also receive some classified support.
- Academic coaches to return to classrooms: The district’s academic coaches are returning to the classroom or filling other district positions as part of a cost savings measure.
- Creekside Alternative Middle School eliminated: This reduction saves the district one full-time teaching position and one full-time classified support staff position.

Corps of Engineers donates computers

The U.S. Army of Corps of Engineers recently donated 58 computers worth approximately $30,000 to Walla Walla Public Schools to provide more technology options for students.

The donation was made possible by the Department of Defense Computers for Learning Program. The computers will be used to support classroom instruction, according to Walla Walla Public Schools Technology Director Janis Barton.

"The goal of this program is to provide computer technology as an integral part of every classroom to assist in the education of students to meet 21st Century learning demands," Barton said. "This is a significant donation. In economic times like we are witnessing, this allows the school district to provide resources that would otherwise not be possible."

Lt. Col. Michael Farrell, commander of the Walla Walla District, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, said this donation was the right thing to do.

"We recently replaced many of our computer systems at the Corps, and I knew there were local organizations that we could help. I was thrilled when the Walla Walla Public Schools expressed interest in partnering with us," Farrell said.
